

Direct Deposit and automated payments are convenient means of conducting personal finances. Ensure proper clearing with the correct account format when initiating such transactions.

Obtaining the proper information:

- If you have a checking account using the bottom line of your check (the micr number) is one means of insuring accuracy. You should include the routing number and the middle set of numbers, which is the account number. (The last set of numbers is the check number.)
- Specifically for share deposits use your member number followed by the 3 digit format of the account suffix
 - Example: Member number 99999 followed by:
 - 000 Savings
